

Nuanced Considerations

Recent Voices in
Namibian-German Colonial History

Edited by Wolfram Hartmann

OrumbondePress

Contents

Contributors

v

Preface

7

1 – Wolfram Hartmann

Introduction

10

2 – Christine Hardung

Commando and band – two forms of violence-based communities in late 18th and early 19th century southwestern Africa

23

3 – Matthias Häussler

Why OvaHerero accommodated the Germans?

On the 'pacification' of an acephalous society: co-operation and violence.

41

4 – Matthias Häussler

On asymmetric warfare –

the case of OvaHerero in precolonial and early colonial times

61

5 – Wolfram Hartmann

Men and women in colonial Windhoek, 1890 to 1905

79

6 - Andreas Eckl and Matthias Häussler with Jekura Kavari

Oomambo wandje komuhoko wOvaHerero "Words to the OvaHerero nation"

The Extermination Order of Lothar von Trotha

109

7 – Isabel V. Hull

The military campaign in German South West Africa, 1904 – 1907 and the genocide of the OvaHerero and Nama

117

8 - Matthias Häussler

From destruction to extermination:

Genocidal escalation in Germany's war against OvaHerero, 1904

133

Compounds, camps, colonialism

157

10 – Jonas Kreienkamp

“Extermination camps” in German South West Africa?

On the rôle of concentration camps during the OvaHerero and Nama Wars 1904 -1908

172

11 – Matthias Häussler

Between annihilation and clemency:

Concentration camp rule in German South West Africa, 1904-1908

187

12 - Werner Hillebrecht

Archival evidence of robbed human remains:

Problems, gaps, and reconstructions

205

13 – Holger Stoecker and Andreas Winkelmann

Skulls and skeletons from Namibia in Berlin

Results of the Charité Human Remains Project

215

14 – Andreas Eckl

The OvaHerero genocide of 1904:

Source-critical and methodological considerations

237

15 – Birthe Kundrus

Continuities, parallels, perceptions

Reflections on the ‘colonisation’ of National Socialism

265

16 – Werner Hillebrecht

‘Certain uncertainties’ or

Venturing progressively into colonial apologetics?

282

17 – Jakob Zollmann

From Windhuk to Auschwitz – old wine in new bottles?

Review article

303

Bibliography